CHANGE TO THE SUBSCRIPTION BLOCK SIZE OF NEWGOLD DEBENTURES

The NewGold ETF prospectus issued on 27 October 2004 (the "Prospectus") makes provisions for In Specie Subscriptions and Redemptions of the NewGold Bullion Debentures ("Debentures") whereby an Investor may subscribe/redeem Debentures in exchange for an In Specie delivery of Gold Bullion, to the extent that the investor is allowed and approved to deliver/receive Gold Bullion, subject to the minimum number of Debentures, which is currently 400 000 (the "Block"), which may be traded for an In Specie transaction to be fulfilled.

One of the primary benefits of Exchange Traded Funds ("ETFs") such as NewGold ETF in particular, is that the ETF security should be easily tradeable or liquid. Liquidity is largely dependent on the ease and efficiency at which they can be created, bought, sold, redeemed and administered. NewGold Issuer has determined that the size of the Block needs to be reduced in order to maximise liquidity for all market participants.

NewGold Issuer (RF) Limited hereby gives notice that, as of 1 December 2018, the In Specie trading Block will be reduced from 400,000 to 100,000 Debentures by the amendment of the definition of Block in Annexure A of the Prospectus as follows:

"Block" means 100 000 Bullion Debentures".

This amendment will not prejudice or diminish the rights of investors nor will it adversely affect the terms and conditions of Debentures currently in issue to investors.

All items capitalised herein are defined in the Prospectus and reference must be made thereto.
